

Your second life your way

A guide to planning your pension, on your terms.

Retirement is not an end, it's the start of something new

We're living longer, which is great news! In fact, today's retirees can look forward to enjoying two to three decades of life after work. We're also fitter and more active than previous generations. So, are you ready to live your second life on your terms?

This guide will help you to prepare for your retirement as well as to work out your goals. Armed with this, you can look forward to the future you want with confidence.

Retirement for a new generation

We no longer stop working and put our feet up. Today's retirees are working later and living longer. Better yet, they're also living their Second Lives on their own terms.

- In retirement you will have 2,000 extra hours a year to do something you want to do.¹
- The number of people aged 65 years is set to reach over 1 million by 2030 and over 1.81 million by 2057.²
- One in nine never intend to retire and 56% expect to be 65 or older.³

What will your second life look like?

Your retirement will mark the end of your main working life and the beginning of a new phase. It's a period of great transition where you can enjoy the freedom to pursue different opportunities and interests. So how should you prepare?

As you approach your second life, try to develop a new routine. Do things that stimulate you and help you engage with your community. Think of retirement as an opportunity to develop an interest you've always had.

Join a club. Look at further education opportunities. Think about turning a hobby into a business. Return to early ambitions that may have passed you by.

It's a time for you to look forward and embrace the opportunity to live your second life on your terms. To determine your dream, plan it and then live it.

Make your second life a healthy life

How your health impacts on your retirement is very important. Think of it as your real wealth. Be proactive about it. Look after it. Invest in it and it'll pay you back in spades.

Staying physically active

Work with your doctor to make sure you're making the right choices to live a healthy lifestyle. It's the key to your longevity.

Choose to explore new hobbies that help you stay fit while you enjoy your second life. Join a walking group. Take up golf or tennis. Work your way up from light jogging to travelling the world running marathons! Suitable weight bearing activities, combined with a diet rich in calcium and vitamin D for optimum bone health, will help you stay fit and mobile in your later years.

Physical activity also has huge benefits for your peace of mind.

Staying mentally sharp

Mental activity is the other vital component of a rewarding retirement. It's like keeping any other part of you active – use it or lose it. Brainpower used to do crosswords, to read books or newspapers and to play games of strategy, such as bridge or chess, can delay the onset of Alzheimer's disease and will help to reduce the risk of dementia.*

Your second life is an exciting new chapter – make it work for you by keeping a positive attitude towards your health and wellbeing.

The big countdown

Whether you're five years away from retiring or just a few months, there's still time to fine-tune your finances. Make sure you're on the right track by getting an idea of the income you can expect.

Look at the figures. Get statements of your projected retirement values from your financial adviser.

Got another source of income?

This could come from investments, property or land, part-time employment or consultancy, or an inheritance. Having the full picture will help you make final decisions about how you want to take your pension income and make more accurate plans as your second life begins.

Budget realistically. Is the money you think you'll need to spend in retirement in line with your projected income? If there's a shortfall, it's not too late to boost your pension pot.

Review your investments. Consider various factors such as your attitude to risk and how you intend to use your pension pot.

One year to go. Contact your financial adviser for the latest forecast of your retirement income and lump sum. You should also contact the Department of Social Protection about your State Pension entitlement three months before your 66th birthday.

Remember, you could also consider delaying retirement, giving your pension pot more chance to grow.

Funding your second life

What is the best way for you to use your pension pot? You have several choices: lump sum, annuity and/or remain invested (in an approved retirement fund (ARF) or a Vested Personal Retirement Savings Account (PRSA)).

Lump sum

You can take up to 25% of your fund as a lump sum. You might want to use this to pay off your mortgage, put in a new kitchen or head off on the holiday of a lifetime. You can take up to €200,000 tax free. Lump sums between €200,001 and €500,000 are taxed at 20%, with any balance over this amount taxed at your marginal rate and subject to the Universal Social Charge. If you've a company pension, the amount of lump sum may be based on your salary and the number of years you're a member of the scheme.

The more money you take out as a lump sum, the less you'll have to buy an annuity or remain invested (by investing in an ARF or a Vested PRSA) which means you'll have less income in retirement.

Annuity

An annuity converts the money in your pension pot to an income guaranteed for the rest of your life, no matter how long you live.

Talk to your financial adviser about the best product (including charging structure) for you.

Vested PRSA or ARF

A Vested PRSA or an ARF are more flexible and allow you to keep your fund invested and decide how much taxable income you wish to withdraw each year.

Talk to your financial adviser about the best product (including charging structure) for you.

Some pros

Annuity	Vested PRSA/ ARF
Have your income paid as a fixed amount	Flexibility and control when taking income from your pot
Arrange for your spouse or civil partner to continue receiving income after you die	By leaving your fund invested, you can benefit from any potential investment growth
Have your income automatically increase each year	You can leave any remaining fund to your family (subject to tax)
	You can use the ARF to purchase an annuity at any point

Some things to consider

Annuity	Vested PRSA/ ARF
Annuities are paid at a fixed rate. Unless you pay for additional options to protect against factors such as inflation, the real value of your annuity payment may decrease over time.	Your fund may run out during your lifetime due to investment performance or if you withdraw too much income
Fund is no longer invested so there is no growth potential	Investing your pension fund carries the same risks – funds can down as well as up
Payments will stop on death (unless you have chosen to include your spouse or a minimum payment period for an additional cost)	Not everyone is eligible for an ARF
If you choose additional options, they will reduce your annuity income	From age 61 you must take a minimum level of income every year. Currently 4% of the value of your fund. From age 71, this increases to 5%

Warning: The value of a Vested PRSA/ARF investment may go down as well as up.
Warning: If you invest in a Vested PRSA/ARF you may lose some or all of the money you invest.
Warning: The income you earn from a Vested PRSA/ARF investment may go down as well as up.
Warning: A Vested PRSA/ARF may be affected by changes in currency exchange rates.

When can I take my retirement benefits?

Personal pensions

You can take your benefits from age 60. Or if you prefer, you can continue working and adding to your pension policy. In this way, you can delay taking your benefits any time up to age 75.

PRSAs

You can take your benefits from as early as age 50, if you are an employee and fully retired.

Otherwise, the earliest is age 60. You can continue working and contributing if you want to delay taking benefits up to age 75.

Company pension schemes

You normally take your benefits when you reach the company's retirement age. With your company's and trustees' approval, you may be able to take your benefits early (age 50 or older) or continue working, contributing and delay taking your benefits (up to age 70).

State entitlements

The State Pension (Contributory) is paid to people from age 66 who have enough Irish social insurance contributions and are resident in the State. You can choose to defer claiming your pension up until age 70.

You can find out more information on citizensinformation.ie, welfare.ie, or from your financial adviser.

What does this mean for you?

Is it true that I can shop around for the best annuity rates?

Yes, your policy will likely contain an 'open market option', which means you should shop around all providers for the best rate. But the financial strength of a provider, as well as the standard of its customer service, can also be important factors, given that this income could be payable to you for many years.

I have several pensions, should I consolidate?

This may be a good idea. It's easier and often more cost effective to transfer your pensions into the one pot – because everything is in the one place. First check that you are not giving up any valuable guarantees such as an annuity rate or investment promise. There may be charges for moving, and there's no guarantee that your investment will be worth more if you move it. Talk to your financial adviser.
